Prez Sez

Our summer “high season” was very successful here at the park. Sales in the Visitor Center were at an all time high, thanks to the great selections made by Tami Rakstad-Schaner and the sales committee. The quality and selection of items is excellent and many visitors comment on them.

The CBTA Board made a good decision to select our summer intern through the Student Conservation Association (SCA). Our intern, Nicole Forthofer was a definite addition to the interpretive programs and was a delight for all of us who worked with her. We will continue to contract with SCA for next year.

Autumn in now here and we’re experiencing the wonderful showing of fall colors. We anticipate that construction of the new Interpretive Center will go out to bid before the end of 2008. Keep those fingers crossed!

Margaret Bell

Membership/Raffle

Thank you Lisa Shinn, docents, volunteers, Arnold Angels, Sierra Nevada Logging Museum and all friends of the Park who donated endless hours counting and stuffing envelopes October 14 and 16…20,000 letters were sent out to our local community and friends beyond.

Our membership/fund raising drive included raffle tickets: Seven nights at the Palm Springs Marriott Resort generously donated by Mike and Paulette Meany; “A Day on the Bay” donated by Robert and Sylvia Edwards; and, as third prize, a one-year State Park Pass. These generous contributions made this event possible. The wining tickets will be drawn on Sunday, November 23, the last day of our Holiday Sale at the Visitor Center. You will have received this mailing prior to our newsletter.

Thank you for your continuing support of CBTA and the interpretive programs we support.

Charlotte Hunt
Reading the papers and watching the news we are inundated by how bad retail sales are doing almost everywhere.

Luckily our little Visitor Center at Calaveras Big Trees State Park seems to be an anomaly, because we are having our biggest year ever! Last year we broke all records in the history of CBTA and we didn’t think we could do any better. Well we are and what a year it has been. Year to date we are having an increase in visitors who are spending more on average. That means more money for the interpretive programs here at the park!

If you haven’t been to the Visitor Center in a while, please come in and check out all our new and different merchandise. The Sales committee and I are trying to get Green and buy American. Some of our new Green items include stainless steel water bottles, battery-less flashlights and blankets made from 100% recycled fibers. Our “Made in America” items include MarqArt wood boxes, Channel Craft games, Sugar Woodcrafts who make the cedar book marks among other things and much more. The Visitor Center is a great place to buy unique gifts at a one of a kind shop.

Tami Rakstad-Schaner
KI-O-TE By Verna Johnston

On occasional evenings throughout the year, those who leave their windows open get a chance to tune in on their own special “Music of the Night.” It comes as a chorus of howls, yips, and barks from the hills and open spaces – coyotes singing to the moon. Residents whose homes back up to the hills see and hear the animals regularly.

Coyote cries, unearthly as they are, lack the mournful haunting quality of the wolves that once shared much of California and the western United States. The wolves have been gone from the Golden State since the late 1800’s, gunned down, trapped and poisoned by ranchers and early settlers, while coyotes have persisted to become the most widespread predators in the nation, despite attempts to wipe them out. They are canny survivors – can live almost anywhere, in the wilderness, in swamps, forests, deserts and coastal areas. They even get along on the outskirts of human habitation and have invaded cities like Los Angeles, Denver, Phoenix and New York, but their favorite habitat is grasslands.

A big reason for their success is their omnivorous diet – they are not choosy about what they eat, feeding on anything smaller than themselves. Rabbits, ground squirrels, mice and rats are favorites but their menu also includes lizards, snakes, poultry, fruits and berries, insects and even carrion. Quail, mourning doves, towhees and other birds that spend a lot of time on the ground need to keep a watchful eye on their surroundings.

Patient hunters that they are, coyotes will wait outside a hole, poised to pounce on an emerging rodent. Sometimes they will do a little dance in short steps on the grassy thickets to startle a vole hiding there into running, revealing its position. Earth movements of pocket gophers pushing dirt out of their burrows rarely go unnoticed nor does a plant that suddenly starts to shake as it is pulled down into the underground. The coyote’s tannish gray coat blends into dry grasses to provide excellent camouflage. Its grace, erect pointed ears and slender muzzle resemble a German shepherd. Large coyotes have been known to mate with large dogs to produce a hybrid called a “coydog”. But dogs and cats are potential dinners for coyotes.

Native Americans lived close to the earth and the animals on it and they revered the coyote in their folklore. According to Zuni legend, the coyote taught men to hunt. The Sioux believed it taught humans about useful plants. The Indians of the Northwest credited the coyote with putting salmon in the river and teaching them how to build fish traps and salmon spears. Many stories depict the coyote as a trickster, and he is always a colorful character on the American scene.

In Memoriam
Janet Nixon
Jack Seth Kirkwood
Jessie Clark
Nell Cornell
Betty Bradley
Calaveras Big Trees Association
PO Box 1196
Arnold CA 95223-1196
Return Service Requested

We’re on the web: www.bigtrees.org

Our Mission: To assist and support the interpretation and environmental education programs at Calaveras Big Trees State Park

Big Tree Bulletin
Editors: Dan and Ellie Wendin
Contributors: Jayne Henning Childress, Charlotte Hunt, Verna Johnston, Tami Rakstad-Schaners
Circulation: Lisa Shinn
Mailing: Marilyn and Larry Larson

2008-09 CBTA Officers/Board
President: Margaret Bell
Vice President: Dick Watson
Treasurer: Richard Szukalski
Secretary: Bunny Firebaugh
Bulletin Chair: Bruce Thomsen
Fundraising Chair: Charlotte Hunt
Publicity Chair: Marcy Crawford
Seminars Chair: Steve Stocking
Website Chair: Dennis Pinion
The Board meets monthly the last Wednesday at 1 PM.

The CBTA dues year is the calendar year (Life Members excepted). Expiration date appears on your mailing label.